Synopsis

Stuart J. Murphy travels all over the United States talking to thousands of kids. And you'll never believe what they talk about: MATH! Stuart writes funny stories about math -- and if you read his books, you'll start to see the fun in math, too.

Grade 1-3-At the school fair, the art teacher is painting faces for 50 cents each. Jessie would like to participate, but she just bought an ice-cream cone and has only 39 cents left. Fortunately, there is a penny pot where children put their extra change, so Jessie sits down to wait. As the youngsters approach the booth, their money is counted out and their extra pennies are added to the pot. When Jessie adds up the change and finds that there is 51 cents, she can finally get her face painted to look like a cat. The counting of money becomes a real experience in this appealing story; life-size, authentic-looking coins are used in the brightly colored illustrations, which also show multiethnic children having a good time. Money-related activities are appended. Teachers will welcome this addition to math-curriculum materials. Marty Abbott Goodman, L.J. Bell Elementary School,

This book went perfect with my 2nd grade level counting money lesson during my student teaching. I was evaluated very high for incorporating literature in my math lesson. I couldn't be happier with my decision to purchase this book.

With the new financial literacy TEKS it fits in perfectly!

A great book to introduce money concepts.

Cute book about money.

They are using this book in my kids school now and I'm so glad I got it. .. We look at it. .. and it helps with

Can't wait to use when we start money unit

Great book

VERY cute book. The children (7 and 8 years old) were enthralled. The story line was strong and the message of sharing was evident. However, this does not teach children to save THEIR OWN money. It is a little too socialist for me - seriously - I don't want to teach my children to wait on someone else to drop their pennies into a pot so my kids can have what they want. The story should have focused more on how the little girl could have EARNED her own pennies.
