Libby Riddles moved to Alaska at age 16. She homesteaded in a remote area of western Alaska, and lived for six years in an Inupiat village in Northern Alaska. Her love of animals evolved into a recreational interest in sled dogs, and later, a passion for sled dog racing and a monumental victory in the Iditarod, the "Last Great Race On Earth." On March 20th, 1985, Libby Riddles made history. She became the first woman to win the grueling 1,049-mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race, after a daring move across Norton Sound in a deadly blizzard. Libby currently lives in Homer, Alaska, and her Blazing Kennels has 28 sled dogs. After three summers in Juneau developing the number one rated "heli-mushing" tour, she is now one of the main Alaskan presenters for Princess Cruises, and enjoys being one of the leading representatives of her sport to the thousands of visitors every summer who come to her on-board shows. Shannon Cartwright arrived in Alaska in 1972 after graduating from the University of Michigan School of Architecture and Design. She was drawn north by the stories she heard as a child from her grandmother, Esther Schaubel, a famous public-health nurse who spent 15 years in the Alaska bush during the '40s and '50s. Â She has spent most of her Alaska years living in the bush, away from the road system, and has never owned a TV or a computer and communicates by satellite phone and US mail. Cartwright has traveled all over the state working on a set-net site in Bristol Bay, driving horse-pack trips, guiding in the Alaska Range and Brooks Range, researching book projects, and traveling between her cabins by train, skis, snowmobiles, and horses. She expresses her love of Alaska through the 28 children's books she has illustrated, seven of which she has also written.

This was one of my favorite books as a kid, and it turns out that it is still amazing. Great pictures and great story. I taught my toddlers all about the Iditarod, this year. Hopefully they learn to love it as much as my parents and I do!

Read this to my 2nd Grade class and they loved Danger and the story of Libby Riddles.

Great book. Most my kids were born in Alaska. And consider this a must have in their library of kids books. So each of my kids families receive it from me.

Fun to read to my grandchildren.

kids favorite

cute book by the first woman to win the iditarod. I've read it since I was a kid and gave it to a friend as a gift. he loved it.

Great book even for adults...I learned from reading it before giving it to our 8 year old neighbor.

I even read this to the older kids (sixth grade) and they love it. Use it for a lesson on what they would dream of for themselves. Great surprise.
